The class of 1962 was born during a great war. It was during the giddy aftermath of that war which saw the shuffling of morals, the rise in prices, the making of political alliances. The skirts grew shorter, television challenged the movies, Yogi Bear and Huckleberry Hound competed with Jack Paar. Mad Magazine rubbed elbows with Reader's Digest and Psycho thrilled excitement-hungry crowds. Rock and Roll replaced the big band sounds of Glenn Miller and the Dorsey Brothers. The fashions of the 20's made a bold comeback in the face of rockets and astronauts. A small, fat man named Khrushchev made quick advances to replace a little German corporal named Hitler. The office of the president of the United States finally cracked the religious barrier, China's millions were swept into Communist camps while Africa made rumbling noises and new Nations with equal vigor. The Lloyd Center opened in Portland. In the midst of all this, the class of '62 nervously donned caps and gowns, squared their shoulders, and marched boldly into the Space Age in the month of May in the year One Thousand Nine Hundred Sixty-two. To this class, and the millions of American classes like it, falls the responsibility to make sure Old Glory will continue to wave O'er this Land of the Free.
